

"Sunshine!-

this paint's used in the tropics"

SAYS PAINTER BILL

"Out in India and Africa, where it's swelterin' hot every day and perishin' cold at night, they uses this same paint I'm putting on your house. The name's Brolac, and it's made to stand up to every sort of weather, not only sun, but snow, hail, rain and sea-spray. Chemical smoke, too, and steam indoors.

"You see, there's lacquer in it, what they calls Chinese lacquer. That gives Brolac a finish the equal of any enamel, brilliant and hard. And that's how you save money.

"Not only because Brolac lasts longer, but because of all the labour saved. When I uses Brolac I don't need any extra coats of varnish or enamel. And labour, sir, is four-fifths of the total cost of house-painting. You can see—work it out for yourself—what you've saved by insisting on Brolac."
