ADVICE TO CONSERVATIVES

LOWESTOFT M.P. AT TORQUAY

"BE PREPARED FOR EARLY ELECTION"

LIBERAL PARTY AND THE GOVERNMENT

"I feel more than ever convinced, although I should be reluctant to strike a pessimistic note, that there is little or no hope for this country, and indeed the Empire as a whole, unless within a reasonable space of time we can get back into office a strong Conservative Administration." These were the words of Mr. J. G. Gervais, M.P. for Lowestoft, addressing members of the Devon Liberal Federation and Torquay Division Junior Imperial League at Torquay Townhall on Saturday night.

The present incumbent Government of footers, said Sir Gervais, was to be kept in office if necessary for a space of two or more years before the Liberals thought they might thereby gain some electoral advantage for themselves. In order to do this they were willing to sacrifice every principle for which the once great Liberal Party had stood in the past.

The right and right view for Conservatives to take was to be prepared for an early general election. When that came, they would be ready to meet the Liberal Party on its own terms, like a thief in the night, and they must not let it that they were not caught unawares.

Mr. Gervais, who is a member of the Conservative Party, said that he was living in very serious times. In the last twelve months our exports had fallen by £12,000,000, and our imports by £12,000,000. The disease was recognized by everyone, who said something about the need for a new policy.

The Socialist pinned his faith to the old-fashioned remedy of increasing the patient almost to death, thinking that by depriving industry of the capital and life-blood, it would reduce industry to poverty.

The Liberal doctor apparently put his faith in the transfusion of blood, thinking that by taking large sums of money from the pockets of the middle class, and giving it in loans and doles to others, he would effect improvement. While it may bring temporary relief to the sufferer it was apt to have dangerous results to the nation.

There were one or two quacks. There was Sir John Simon, who had been in without being called in, and he had a gathering up of remedies, but Sir Gervais thought that these would be put in him.

Most of them preferred to trust the remedies of the quacks, and carefully building up the health and strength of the patient, so that if later on more drastic methods were required, they would not be met by the familiar patient.

Operative surgery was required, but unfortunately the patient died of shock.

LESSONS OF BY-ELECTIONS

"COUNTRY SICK AND TIRED OF SOCIALIST GOVERNMENT."

If they studied the results of the municipal elections and looked at the results of the by-elections in places like Shipley and East Renfrew they would see that the country was sick and tired of the present Socialist Government, and was looking more and more to what was the old alternative, another Conservative Administration.

What would the Conservatives do? They would have the task of clearing up the mess that had been created during the past eighteen months, and they would have to do a great deal more. Alone among the political parties they were putting before the country a definite constructive policy of economy, sense likely to have immediate beneficial results.

They placed in the forefront the need for an immediate and drastic national economy. There was not the slightest doubt that this country was heading straight for bankruptcy and disaster if they did not cut a hair. This question of economy was one which must be faced.

The next question they would have to deal with was the great abuse that was being placed in many parts of the unemployment insurance scheme. Conservatives supported unemployment insurance in the sense that when people were in employment they ought to be encouraged and assisted to pay something to tide them over a rainy day. It was a pernicious system that encouraged a man to idle rather than work, that made it almost as profitable, in some cases more profitable, to idle than to work.

DISAPPOINTED DOMINIONS

A great Imperial Conference had been held in London, and all the Dominion statesmen had been sent home disappointed. They came prepared to discuss any proposals that would be to the mutual benefit of the Mother Country and the Empire as a whole, and to their astonishment they thought they found our Government had nothing whatever to propose or put before them.

If they were to have a policy which would carry the country, it must be a practical one that was likely to yield definite results in a reasonable space of time, and it must be a policy that would appeal to the imagination of the people, and especially to those of the younger generation.

Safeguarding of industry could be applied immediately, and he believed would give quick and beneficial results. They had a policy that should appeal to the imagination of every thinking person in the development of the boundless resources of the British Empire.

The Conservative Party today was the only political party that wholeheartedly believed in the British Empire as an instrument of progress and power.

In conclusion, Sir Gervais said, "I am no pessimist with regard to the future, although I recognize the critical needs of the times in which we are living, but I do not believe the strength of will, fixity of purpose and sound political judgment which have always distinguished the British will fail us in these critical times."

Mr. C. Williams, M.P. for Torquay, said there must be a general tariff on foreign manufactured goods coming into the country, and we should have the power definitely to stop dumping when it was a great trade alliance with the various countries of our Empire in the common interest of every section of our community.

"FARMERS NOT DOWN & OUT"

BRAINS NEEDED IN AGRICULTURE

STRENGTH OF N.F.U. IN SOMERSET

Somerset Farmers' Union—now the strongest county branch in England and Wales, with a membership of 6,700—held its 18th annual meeting on Saturday at Castle Cary, Mr. L. H. Wear presiding.

In the morning the Executive Committee elected Mr. Fred C. Gollidge as chairman for the ensuing year, and Mr. F. Thomas, of the Milphead branch, vice-chairman.

The Townhall, where the gatherings were held, was crowded for the annual general meeting in the afternoon, when an address was given by Mr. J. Stratton of Kingston Dore.

A comprehensive survey of the position of agriculture and of the policy of the Union was given by Mr. J. Stratton, who said they all realized that the present Government had seriously failed in its duty to agriculture.

Their president, Capt. Morris, had crossed the Atlantic, and he backed him up because they felt he was in the right in the strong sense that he was making for the British farmer.

SOMERSET CONGRATULATED

The Somerset Farmers' Union congratulated the Somerset branch of the Union in England and Wales.

Dealing with the milk question, Mr. Stratton said none of them was satisfied with the position today, and the Milk Committee in London had threatened the matter out and had arranged for representatives to meet members of the Devon Federation on Thursday.

"We of the Farmers' Union must encourage the cheesemakers more than we have done," added Mr. Stratton. "When we make our milk contracts and bargain we must see that there is a clause inserted to help the cheesemakers. Your Cheesemakers' Federation is a body which is doing a great deal of good."

Concluding, he said he had never been a pessimist and did not believe in farmers saying they were down and out.

"I am not in favour of the hay man, but do not believe in straining out worms. We must work more with our brains."

ANNUAL REPORTS

The annual reports of eleven committees of the county executive were presented by Mr. J. G. Vane, chairman. That of the Organization Committee (given by Mr. J. G. Vane) recorded a net increase of 128 members, bringing the total to 6,700.

MORE EXHIBITS AND BETTER WORK

NEWTON ART STUDENTS' DISPLAY

The out-of-door water-colour sketches and drawings by students of Newton Abbot School of Art are being exhibited at the Art School, Newton Abbot, admission being free.

Compared with last year the quality of the work shows improvement, while the number of exhibits has increased. Much of the success of the students' holiday sketches is due to the interest shown in art by Mr. Charles Vicky, chairman of the Higher Education Committee, who yearly offers prizes for competition.

It was noticeable that this year four of the student sketches were of a high class, and some of it is distinctly clever, and all of it pleasing.

Miss Clara White (Paisley) has some pictures of Brittany, and in them she shows a fine appreciation for colour in nature, pure quality, but her work, perhaps, would be improved by a deeper study of tone values in order to achieve distance and perspective. Brilliant in manipulation, the observer is apt to be impressed by the suggestion of their being too "close up."

LOCAL SUBJECTS

Miss Lucy Eglington is showing a large group of trees and shrubs, which is reminiscent of her father's clever work. Another of hers is a narrow street, or alley, between cottages, which is a view of the town of Newton Abbot. Miss Eglington is showing a view of the town of Newton Abbot, which is a view of the town of Newton Abbot.

Mr. H. S. Butcher has a group of twelve carefully finished sketches, some with a strong local interest, such as the entrance to Bradley Manor, Devon, and the old Commercial Hotel in Highwell-street, and views of Kingscliff.

The first prize this year goes to Miss Margery Green, of Bovey Tracey, for a figure composition at a fair ground. Her courage in attacking such a group, and her mastery of it have won her great praise.

A PROMISING ARTIST

There are three equal second prize winners. Miss Noel Long, for a broad view of the moors, with a fine suggestion of space with it; Miss Phyllis Harman, a view of North Bovey, which, though a shade cold in colour, is very clever and dignified; and Miss Norah Watson, who is very young, the inclusion of Miss Watson makes her one of the most promising students in the room. She shows breadth and simplicity, and is particularly successful in her sketches and distances.

Mrs. Hissell has a good collection, but it is noticeable in some of the pictures that she tried to concentrate too much interest inside one frame. Two of her works are exceedingly good.

Miss Jessie Eglington is showing only two works this year, and both are full of promise. Miss Mary Long (Bovey) has three choice sketches, and Mr. Col. Luxmore has six, and one of Haytor has a remarkably good skycape.

Mr. Conway Hatchford, the principal, is to be congratulated on the exhibition.
