Susan

SUCH A SIGHT

Daisv OH, SO DAPPER

SUSAN AND DAISY are newly-weds—but what's happened to Susan? She's become drab and uninteresting, while Daisy still looks like a young bride. Daisy looks cared for—because she gives her clothes a thorough weekly "do" with Thawpit, paying special attention to the back of the collar, cuffs, and waistfront—the places that become grubby first. She knows that clothes absorb dirt; thousands of tiny specks combine to produce a drab appearance.

So clean your own clothes—and your husband's—regularly at home with Thawpit; they'll look better, and last longer.

Supplies of Thawpit are plentiful in most shops. 1/3 a bottle.

"Yes, mother," he said in reply.

On the day that his mother felt well enough to get up, she did not do any work, but watched Larry.

This time he had to sweep under the mats, and when he lifted the one from the front door he found beneath it a nice pirk envelope.

"The presence of Larry is requested at the birthday party of Toby Richgnome on April 2, at dask."
"Hurvah!" whooped Larry. "To think I should get what I've longed for! An invitation to a party—and such a party, toe."
"On what day did you say the party was?" asked his mother gently.
"April 2," answered Larry.
"Foolish grome!" she realist.
